- ❖ Why: For the first time, Southern California residents will have the opportunity to hear about changes to the California Community Colleges that will impact student success across the 112-college system. Public participation and input is very much encouraged.

Peter MacDougall, Manuel Baca and David Rattray will address completion hurdles and discuss draft recommendations designed to help the California Community Colleges improve student achievement. The draft recommendations will be developed into a plan to be considered by the board of governors and subsequently presented to the Legislature no later than March 2012.

California's economy depends on increasing the number of community college students who obtain job training certificates, degrees and transfer to four-year universities. Countless Californians are turning to the community colleges for help at a time when state and federal resources are diminishing. Community colleges must prioritize the types of classes being offered, place an emphasis on increasing student persistence and graduation rates and get creative about helping students reach their educational goals on time.

A California Community Colleges Student Success Task Force was appointed by the board of governors in January 2011 to examine strategies and develop recommendations for promoting student success, including improving the student assessment process, delivering remedial instruction, increasing academic counseling, and using technology to help students reach their goals faster.
